

Rules for Active Voice

Rule	Definition	Example
Subject performs the action	The subject is the grammatical entity that performs the action of the verb. In an active voice sentence, the subject is the one who is doing the action.	The cat chased the rat. The subject is "the cat", and the verb is "chased."
Object receives the action	The object is the grammatical entity that receives the action of the verb. In an active voice sentence, the object is the one who is being acted upon.	The boy wrote a letter. The object is "a letter" and the verb is "wrote."
Verb is in the active voice form	The active voice form of a verb is the form that is used when the subject is performing the action. There are two main forms of the active voice: the simple active voice and the progressive active voice.	Simple active voice: The simple active voice is used to express an action that is completed or habitual. For example, "I eat a banana every day." Progressive active voice: The progressive active voice is used to express an action that is happening at the time of speaking or writing. For example, "I am eating a banana."

Few Examples of Active Voice Sentences:

- The boy kicked the ball.
- The girl cooked dinner.
- The teacher wrote a lesson plan.
- The dog barked at the mailman.
- The cat jumped on the table.